Hiring Process: Lutheran schools generally give priority to calling teachers to serve at their school who are trained through the Lutheran University/College system. Sometimes it is not possible to fill the position through the calling process and the school will resort to hiring teachers locally. The goal is to find Christians who believe in the Lutheran philosophy and approach to teaching, understanding that Lutheran schools are places of nurturing the faith and teaching the love of Jesus. Lutheran schools are distinctive in that they emphasize academic excellence but also are places where each child is loved. This love helps the child to grow in security through the Gospel of Jesus Christ that offers life and hope for today and for eternity.
